VE

such as THIT m. mountain (earth-holder)' will be in itself clear enough and save the student the trouble of looking up TI & UT. By the word abstract I understand chiefly the substantives in $t\bar{a}$ and tva, by the word possessive the adjectives in vant, mant, etc. In a great many instances merely the formation of such words is given, because their special meaning is easily suggested by the groundword and the passage where the derivative occurs. Of brackets a very frequent and various use has been made, which, I suppose, will be clear by itself in each single case. For all these things I call the attention of the reader to the list of abbreviations on the next page.

How far I have relied on my authorities or followed my own judgment, others may decide. I can only say that I have always tried to keep the mean between blindly following and thoughhlessly abandoning the path of my great predecessors. Most difficulties arose from the Rigveda vocabulary, a great part of which has been incorporated into this book. But even on this hotly debated ground I rarely have had occasion to differ from the acknowledged chief of Vedic interpretation.

Before I conclude, I must express my profound gratitude first to the venerable editor of the great work whose treasures I was once more allowed to change into small coin and make accessible to a larger circle; next to his numerous collaborators, one of whom. I hope, will see in the liberty that I have taken of putting his name on the front page of this book, a small but well-meant token of my sincere bomage to his incomparable achievements in more than one branch of Sanskrit and linguistic research. Among those who took a kind interest in the undertaking of this English edition, I have to name, in the first place, Professor Ch. R. Lanman, who during his stay in Europe, three years ago, leut me his valuable aid, and did so much by word and deed that I shall always feel myself his debtor. I can only wish that this book may not fall too short of his expectations. Finally I have to thank all those who kindly assisted me in looking over the proof-sheets, and while doing so favoured me with many a useful suggestion.

Jena. March 1891.

C. Cappeller.